

ROLE OF FAMILY AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT EDUCATION IN ATTAINING SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

1

Family and Human Development (FHD) is one of the major disciplines and an integral part of Home Economics which describes, classifies and explains the development and behavior of an individual from birth to maturity and old age. Education in FHD guides and enables an individual not only to play a better role in the family and society but also to have a well-adjusted and integrated personality with minimum conflict.

Family and Human Development Education and sustainable goals

11

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Sustainable development is development that improves the living conditions in the present without compromising the resources of future generations.

12

The Sustainable Development goals (SDGs)

Are successors to the 'Millennium Development Goals- MDGs'. The MDGs were adopted in 2000 by governments to make global progress on poverty, education, health, hunger and the environment.

During 25-27 September 2015, the member states of the United Nations converged in New York for the United Nations (UN) Summit on Sustainable Development and adopted the new global goals for sustainable development. The world leaders pledged their commitment to the new '2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development', encompassing 17 universal and transformative SDGs
