Objectives:

- 1-To know about the wardrobe planning practices of the girls of RLAK Government College of Home Economics
- 2- To gain more knowledge about their habits of wardrobe planning.

Back ground:

The back ground of this researched studied is to find out the views of RLAK Government College of Home Economics students and to know about their wardrobe planning and the way they used wardrobe practices practically.

Methodology:

It is a quantitative cum qualitative study. The data was based on the views of the students. The 160 girls from RLAK Govt. College of Home – Economics were randomly selected. 40 girls from each section from 1st year to BSc final year. The questionnaire method was selected for data collection which was taken from the RLAK Govt. College of Home – Economics students. The data was 1st entered on EPI program and then exported on SPSS. Frequency and percentages were calculated.

Result:

After the analysis and discussion of result we found out that most students of College of Home Economics were using their educational knowledge while planning their wardrobe. They also had in mind their family budget their values and the application of their knowledge. They bought quality fabric and adopted only that which suited them best. They fully understand those factors and planned their wardrobe to the best possible and managed their wardrobe by using the correct procedures of taking care of clothes and apparels. They used their all wardrobe practices in their wardrobe planning but they do not used stitching practice due to lack of time.
